History of Indian Cuisine

Indian cuisine is a diverse culinary tradition shaped by cultural exchange, migration, and regional variation. Its distinctive features include the use of spices, emphasis on vegetarianism, and influences from the Mughal Empire, Portuguese, and British colonialism. Today, Indian cuisine continues to evolve with new chefs and foodies experimenting with fusion cuisine and innovative flavor combinations. At Chutney House, we're proud to be part of this rich culinary tradition and to share its flavors and aromas with our customers.

The Gables

Built in the late 1700s, 116 High Street was originally constructed as a private residence in Maldon, Essex. Over the next two centuries, it took on several different purposes. In the 1800s, it housed an artist's studio and surgery. During World War I, it served as lodging for military personnel.

After the war, 116 High Street operated as a hotel and boarding house for decades. In the 1930s, it became a children's home for 60 years, housing generations of children including the art forger Eric Hebborn. Today, following a period of vacancy and renovations, 116 High Street is the Chutney House, an Indian restaurant that pays homage to the building's layered history. Despite changes, it has retained its 18th-century elegance and historic character, its storied past embedded within its enduring walls.

Maldon Gold Beer

In addition to a menu of authentic Indian cuisine, the Chutney House offers a select array of beers to perfectly pair with your meal. One of the restaurant's top choices is Maldon Gold, a locally brewed beer made in nearby Maldon, Essex using fresh, high-quality ingredients. This golden ale has floral and fruity notes that complement the complex and aromatic spices in Chutney House's dishes.

As a locally sourced beer, Maldon Gold is an ideal choice for patrons who value supporting small and independent producers. It is also a light, crisp beer that is ideal for balancing out spicy curries and rich meat dishes. Whether you are looking for a taste of Essex or the ideal beverage match for your meal, Maldon Gold is an excellent option at the Chutney House, where friendly staff can offer recommendations and insights on their beer and wine list.
